

National Commission for the Certification of Crane Operators

Committed to Quality, Integrity and Fairness in Testing Since 1995

Lift & Move USA Special Issue 2015

Moving 1,500 ton loads across country; lifting entire bridges into place; taking part in the world's most important infrastructure projects: these are some of the day-to-day activities of companies operating in the multi-billion dollar crane, rigging and specialized transportation industry in the U.S.

The crane, rigging and specialized transportation industries are experiencing a shortage in skilled labor. Companies across the country are looking to bolster their workforce with people interested in long, fulfilling careers with very competitive salaries. These jobs include everything associated with the operation and maintenance of heavy equipment like cranes. Crane operators, riggers, mechanics, welders, IT specialists, salespeople, specialized transportation engineers and branch managers are all highly sought.

While we know you are already a part of the industry, maybe you know someone who is thinking about joining the industry and would benefit from this two-day event aimed at attracting high school students, students at vocational, technical and community colleges, and veterans to the industry. The program will include presentations by young people who have made successful careers in the industry as well as sessions on types of jobs available, expected salaries, career progression, and opportunities for certification as well as case studies demonstrating the types of activities in which employers are engaged.
